To shoot book blurbs at people inside the book trade is a distressing waste of good white paper and good black ink. From time to time The Century Co. will address the trade through the P. W. and will attempt to supply information that will be actively helpful to people selling their books to retail buyers. We have published this month the following:

THE FARMER OF ROARING Run

By MARY DILLON
Author of "The Rose of Old
St. Louis," etc.
12 mo, 431 pages
Frontispiece. $1.90

SINCE "The Rose of old St. Louis" Mrs. Dillon has had a considerable following of American readers. She can be relied upon for a novel with plenty of love interest, a certain charm of narrative due to her possession of the born story-teller's gift, and a happy ending. "The Farmer of Roaring Run" is like that. It is clean and wholesome; it may be recommended for any story-lover from sixteen to sixty. It is a romance with a double love-theme. The setting is on a rich young man's estate in the Virginia mountains.

COGGIN

By ERNEST OLDMEOADOW
Author of "Antonio"
12 mo, 400 pages
$1.75

THIS is a story especially for those who appreciate a product of an exquisite literary craftsmanship; and especially, too, for mothers. Mr. Oldmeadow is an English author with a good many novels to his credit. He can write. "Coggin" is the story of a ragman's boy in a small English town stiff with snobbery and class-prejudice. He is hungry for the finest things of civilization. On his side is his mother and a great-hearted preacher. Against him is all the rest of the world that he can feel. The novel is the story of his fight upward.

MY ESCAPE FROM GERMANY

By ERIC A. KEITH
12 mo, 354 pages
$1.75

AN extremely well-written account of the author's three attempts to escape from a German detention camp, the last of which was successful; with much information about these camps. If personal danger and daring and breathless chases appeal to the average reader, then this true story of real adventure should please that multitudinous person who means so much to all of us—the average reader.

THE FLOW OF VALUE

By LOGAN GRANT
McPHERSON
Author of "How the World
Makes Its Living"
8vo. 470 pages
$2.50

IF you say this is a book on economics and sociology, which it is, and by one of the profoundest as well as one of the most practical students of these subjects—many buyers will flee in fear of the two terrible words. But the book really indicates—as any good practical work on economics or sociology should—how we can all produce more wealth and get it so distributed that all of us can have more wealth and more comfort and more happiness. But it is not a primer for children; it is for adult minds. We have millions of them.

"GIVE A THOUGHT TO BOOKS!"

A New New York Publishing Center

IN the many progressive steps marking the general trend of the up-town movement in New York, there have been several different groupings of publishing offices which might for a time have been called publishing centers, but their existence at best was brief and the groups dissolved, only to reappear again in locations farther up-town. At one time it seemed as tho that part of Fifth Avenue below the crossing with Broadway might be such an oasis, and the district near Macmillan contained several publishing firms. Scribner was then there, with Dodd Mead, and Putnam and Dutton near by on 23d Street. The tendency north, however, did not seem to halt, and another group gathered itself near Thirty-third Street and Broadway, where Oxford, Lane, Doubleday, Moffat and Appleton now are, and a still larger group formed what could be called a publishing center on Fourth Avenue above Twenty-fifth Street where Dodd, Mead put up a building and where Stokes, Longmans, Century, Baker & Taylor, George Sully, Cupples & Leon and others located.

This district is in turn being invaded by other types of business and is much more a silk district than anything else at the present. In the interest of their retail departments, three stores crossed Forty-second Street, viz.: Dutton, Scribner and Putnam, and in the side streets have appeared the addresses of several publishing houses, Holt, Harcourt, Brace & Howe, the Henley Publishing Co., and Scott & Seltzer.

Word has recently been going around that a building was to be put up on Seventh Avenue and Eleventh Street, into which publishers were being specially urged to gather, so that the subject of a publishing center may be again in the air. If Harper & Brothers move their printing establishment from downtown to the country within a few years, as it has been rumored, they would be prospective lessees of new city offices for their editorial department.

With the present tendencies to change in mind, it would seem a good plan to have publishing locations discussed, and the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, perhaps from its consciousness of having found an excellent location in Forty-fifth Street for its purpose, would like to see brought forward the advantages of such a district as Sixth Avenue above Forty-second Street and those side streets from Forty-fourth to Forty-eighth Streets between Fifth and Sixth Avenue. Here is a district easily accessible, convenient to clubs, shops, the Library and the headquarters for every visitor to New York. Just below Times Square is a large center for printing plants and the district is accessible to various kinds of transportation and not at present built up for office use. With publishing houses gathering in this district, it might quickly become a real center for American publishing. There are decided advantages in having a trade such as publishing centered in one district. Business between one and the other can easily be done, out-of-town shipments easily gathered, list boys can work to better advantage, and editors readily be found by authors visiting from other cities. A discussion of the problem of location might well be put forward at this time.

Getting Together

THREE is no watchword that is more important in the world of to-day than that of "get together." That is the spirit out of which the League of Nations was born, and the principle involved is peculiarly applicable at this time in all business affairs. The book-trade needs to get together as between publishers, jobbers and retail booksellers; and publishers, whether of books or periodicals, have need to get together with employing printers, and these, in turn, with their employees. Anything counter to this principle is counter to the interests of all.

We regret to find in a report to the employing printers of New York, made at the close of the year, record of a conversation which shows that certain leadership in the printing trades unions has not yet learned this lesson. The report says:

"Chairman Green: No, but supposing that an arbitrator decides certain things, how long does that decision last?

"Mr. Rouse: Until the first of October, 1920.

"Chairman Green: That is what I am getting at.

"Mr. Eilert: And any disputes arising during that time are subject to some agreement, are they not?

"Mr. Rouse: They are subject to negotiation between your association and our organization, that is a matter for us to determine. If you are a small man we might take it out of your hide, if a big man we might arbitrate."

Nothing could be more unfortunate than the chaos in industry which such a spirit would evoke. There must be a steady basis for all business and a clear understanding as to the immediate future, if business is to be prosecuted with any success. Both book and periodical publishers must be able to prophesy their costs well ahead, and a temper which indicates that contracts may at any moment be broken is most disastrous to the interest of employees, as well as of employers.

The strikes of last year proved as disastrous to the employees of printing offices as it did to their principals and their patrons. Nobody gained and everybody lost. This should not happen again, nor should there be any such implied threats as those which President Rouse makes. But employers must recognize on their part that they must do their share in "getting together." Justice and fair dealings should be the aim on both sides, and employers should be eager to know, without compulsion from strikes, just what their men desire and what is fair to both sides. We believe that the new year opens with a better and more helpful feeling than the conversation above suggests.

A copy of Shackleton's "The Book of Philadelphia" has been offered by the Penn Publishing Co. to every member of the American Booksellers' Association who is planning to come to the May convention. A four-day convention in a city with such points of interest as historic Philadelphia presents renders such an offer a graceful act of preliminary hospitality.

An Evening on Drama

The second lecture in the New York Library's Course on Books and Publishing was given on Thursday evening, January 15th in the lecture hall at the Library. Dr. Tucker, of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn and President of the New York Drama League, gave a brilliant talk on the modern play and an appreciation of the importance of dramatic literature in the present world's literary output. "Never," he said, "in the history of the world has the theater been so influential, and attendance is more nearly universal than ever before. Better buildings have been built, the art of lighting has become a great art as well as the art of staging. Such men as Edmund Jones have become a real help to the play. It has been characteristic of this new period of the drama that the printed play has been read more than ever before. England and America are finding enjoyment in reading the play, and of late years our bookstores and libraries have had to meet continuous demands for dramatic literature."

Dr. Tucker said that he did not believe in under-rating the product of our own day and that he believed that the average of plays of today was higher than it had ever been known before. This is partly because the play has a closer relation to life and because it covers every phase of human activity. The average play, he believed, was better today than the average work of fiction. In suggesting plays for the public library out of what is considered the modern period of the last fifty years Dr. Tucker said there were five hundred plays that ought to be on the shelves of any large city library. He did not believe in buying plays by sets, as dramatists were very uneven in their product. All the great European nations had contributed to this period, and most of their works have been translated into English. Hauptmann he considered the greatest living dramatist.

The third lecture in the course was conducted on Thursday evening, Jan. 22d, by Miss Jessie Rittenhouse, the subject being Poetry.

Bruce Rogers Goes to Harvard

The Harvard University Press has announced from Cambridge the appointment of Mr. Bruce Rogers as adviser on printing. Mr. Rogers as is well known, was for many years associated with the Riverside Press and built up the famous series of Riverside Press Special Editions. After leaving Houghton Mifflin's, he did commercial work in New York for a short time and then accepted an invitation to partnership work with Mr. Emory Walker the famous London printer. Afterwards he served as adviser of special printing at the University in Cambridge. It is a great pleasure to see Mr. Rogers' name again connected with book publishing in his own country, as he is not only one of the greatest printers that we have produced but a genius in this field who would reflect credit on the product of any country

THE FAMILY READING TABLE

By Adah F. Whitcomb, Chief of Children's Department, Chicago Public Library

"The old order changeth" and tho we welcome the new, we are sometimes aware of a distinct loss in so doing. Modern life eliminates old family customs and relations. It is to be regretted that among them is the good habit of reading aloud. The multiplicity of children's books has given rise to the idea that literature must be made over and "written down" to bring it within the comprehension of children.

This is a mistake. Any observation of young people shows their minds to be very receptive, reflecting like so many kodaks, the tone and color of the conversation and opinion of their elders. The books and magazines read and discussed in the home have a powerful influence on the taste and habits of the little ones. Observe any group of children playing house or playing school and the imitations are sometimes not as flattering as we could wish. Talk with any cultured persons in whose childhood it was customary for one of the older members of the family to read aloud to the others and they will invariably tell you how dear are the memories of those evenings together and how they listened with eager ears to Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner" and Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" and many other books that were much beyond their real comprehension but which unconsciously helped to form the standards of the style of literature they later chose for themselves. So many personal testimonies of this kind have come to my ear, I feel that they are worthy of consideration. It is also true that a mother who chooses such books as Chambers' "Common Law" cannot expect her daughter to have much better taste.

Reading together forms a bond of common interest and there are numberless books which will interest young and old alike. Many of the present day children's books are almost equally interesting to older persons. In fact, I believe no children's book is really worth while unless it has some appeal to discriminating adults as well. Most of the books now being published as children's classics in such wonderfully attractive illustrated editions, as, the Iliad and the Odyssey, Robinson Crusoe, Gulliver's Travels, Morte d'Arthur, Robin Hood tales, Last of the Mohicans, Mysterious Island and many others, were not originally written to please a juvenile constituency. They have now been relegated almost entirely to the children's shelves. "Two Years before the Mast" will surely prove as fascinating reading for a group of mixed ages to-day as when it was written. "The Oregon Trail" can make vivid the early pioneer hardships and make us realize something of the debt we owe to trail blazers. Countless other books, equally entertaining to both the older and younger members of the family could be chosen, according to the special interests of the group.

If pater familias can be persuaded to do the reading, so much the better; it will leave the mother free to sew or do the coveted fancy work and bring the father in closer touch with the children, with whom, unfortunately, in many modern homes, he is not as well acquainted as he might be.

We hear much of the special need of the "tired business man" for relaxation. But often, instead of the comfort of a quiet evening at home, with the family, reading an interesting book such as Moffet's "Careers of Danger and Daring," he hies himself, perhaps the family, to a moving picture show where the most melodramatic effects to harrow the nerves are presented or a silly unnatural plot, supposed to be funny but often vulgar, is offered.

Campaigns for "better speech" are very much in style to-day and in what better way can the desired results be obtained than thru the reading, aloud if possible, of the best literary productions of all time? Accustoming the ear to correct speech and enlarging the vocabulary constantly in this way has produced many of our greatest writers and speakers, who have left records of their youthful reading.

An appreciation and love for poetry is easily awakened by reading aloud such stirring poems as "Hervé Riel," "Inchcape Rock," "Lady of the Lake," "Skeleton in Armour," to say nothing of many from the work of our modern poets and dramatists.

In choosing books for the family reading, we must ignore the special interests of the members under nine years of age, as they are supposed to be in bed at an early hour but if allowed to listen with the others they will unconsciously be forming standards which will color their later choice of reading. These children should undoubtedly have a reading hour of their own at least once a week.

In this day of such floods of new books and "best sellers" it behooves us to emphasize the choice of books, the reading of fewer and better books and the revival of the good old custom of enjoying these treasures together, thereby creating family ties and common interests which will always be held dear in the memory.

Rather Grimm Business

The Dry Goods Economist tells us of a Birmingham store that has used ideas from Grimm's Fairy Tales for both exterior and interior decoration and yet apparently does not carry books. If children and parents will be attracted by story book decoration, it seems logical that the managers should be aware that the books themselves belong in any real "Juvenile Store" and will serve to attract customers as well as custom.

LO, THE POOR SALESMAN!

By W. E. Hutchinson, Methodist Book Concern

I am a humble book salesman; I make this confession for fear some one might take me for a professor of Greek or Latin. I am also something besides a dispenser of literature, for I am a student of human nature, as every successful book salesman must be, or for that matter, a purveyor of any other commodity.

A book customer has an idea (erroneous however) that every salesman is an oracle; he must possess the wisdom of Solomon, the tact of Huxley, and the patience of Job. This last attribute is quite necessary in his profession, and must be cultivated to a high degree of proficiency to meet the demands made upon him by exacting customers, but the two aforesaid qualifications may well be dispensed with, if the questions asked by the majority of customers are taken as an index of the customer's mental caliber.

There are more different types of people, temperamentally at least, that enter a book shop, than visit any other place of merchandise. Fussy women that get on your nerves, tittering schoolgirls who chatter inanely, and exacting old men who have a penchant for looking but never buy; all with an extravagant knowledge of their own importance; but not one in a hundred knowing what he wants.

A book salesman is a sort of human reservoir into whose ear is poured the flotsam and the jetsam of the literary world.

Here comes a choleric old gentleman with one foot almost on the edge of the grave, and wants the best thing you have on escatology, a very fitting subject for one of his years. You show him "The Undiscovered Country" by Osmun. He accuses you of not knowing your business, showing him a volume on travel instead of one on the future life. "The idea!" And before you can explain he leaves in high dudgeon.

A phlegmatic lady of large proportions who wants to sit while you lug out all the books in the store on the food question, finally selects "Better Meals for Less Money," by Mary Green when for her future good health she could have chosen Pattee's "Practical Dietetics."

A minister wants the latest book on the evidence of Christianity. A theological student wants a book that will answer successfully, "Was the apostle Peter ever at Rome?" Is there an author on earth at the present time that could successfully answer that question?

A pompous lady wants a Bible. "Do you desire the Revised or King James edition?" you ask. "Oh, the Saint James, to be sure, (they always call it St. James). No made over version for me. Small size to fit my hand bag with very large type."

"Shades of Tyndall," one feels like saying, "there ain't no such animal."

A dapper young man wants Rev. Louis Albert Banks' book "On the Trail of Moses," or any other good detective story.

An old lady wants "Jesus Lover of My Soul" by Ian McLaren. When we tell her that this was written by Chas. Wesley she becomes quite indignant, and when in your most palliative tone you inquire if it is not possible that she means "The Days of Auld Lang Syne" by McLaren she said, "Of course, how stupid of me, but I knew it was some religious piece."

Two old ladies want a book for a friend, "something light you know. She never reads, but books are so classy." "Fiction?" we ask. "No, she doesn't care for fiction." "Poetry?" "I hardly think she would fancy poetry." "Travel?" "Oh no, she's traveled everywhere." "Biography?" "Oh dear me, that's too poky. Here's something marked down from $2.00 to 98 c. "Snowbound." I never read it, did you? It looks nice. So cool for summer reading."

"The latest fiction please," says an overdressed woman. "Oh, I've read that. Have you nothing later?" as if asking for a fresh laid egg. "I keep right up to date on books." As if that were a mark of distinction and she probably never read either Dickens, Thackery or Eliot, more's the pity.

"What is the price of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, latest edition?" "Why that's outrageous. Ten years ago I could buy the very same for $5.00." You try to explain, but you are cut short by the phrase, "Profiteering, profiteering, simply outrageous," and Webster remains on the shelf an object of contempt to an irate old fogey.

One of the most trying is the author who asks in a casual way if you have so and so in stock (meaning his own book) and when you bring it from the shelf says, "I just wanted to know if you kept it." He informs you that he is the author as if he were saying, "I am the president of the United States," and gives you to understand that if it were on the front table and properly displayed it would sell readily.

There is a saying uttered in a bookshop that is as ancient as Adam, yet will never grow old; to wit: "Of the making of many books there is no end." Undoubtedly Solomon repeated this platitude ages ago, and Moses referred to it when he read from the tablets of stone. This phrase, hoary with age tho it is, was evidently intended to be used exclusively in a book shop as a means of showing a knowledge of literature.

The book man has a trying existence, open to criticism of all kinds, yet expected to possess the intellect of a Machiavelli.

Pity the poor book salesman. He leads a gay life from chapter to chapter and from introduction to finish; and if a monument is ever erected to the most patient man, Job will have to take a back seat for the book salesman will win the prize, and his epitaph will read: "Hic jacet patiens homo."

The middle period of English fiction is one of many brilliant beginnings. Different forms of fiction for the first time come to birth. The historical novel is begun by Scott and carried on, but by no means sustained, by Ainsworth and Bulwer-Lytton. Jane Austen abandons the novels of incident for the novel of characterization. Dickens makes fiction democratic. The didactic novel comes in with Reade and Kingsley, and the novel of mystery with Collins. The Brontës introduce the tragic note into fiction, while George Eliot and George Meredith make the psychological and the philosophical novel supreme.

"The consummation of the English novel is in Meredith, because in him it became a fully conscious and responsible art form. The novels of Meredith represent the adult-age of the novel."—Holbrook Jackson.

Demonology and Witchcraft, Dutton, 75c.

(Scott began his literary career by writing metrical tales. "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," 1805, "Marmion," 1808, and "The Lady of the Lake," 1810, made him the most popular poet of his day. 6500 copies of "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" sold in the first three years, a record such as poetry had never had before. His later romances in verse, "The Vision of Don Roderick," "Rokeby," "The Lord of the Isles," met with waning interest, owing to the rivalry of Lord Byron, whose more passionate poetic romances superseded Scott's in the public favor.

Scott then abandoned poetry for prose. In 1814 he published anonymously "Waverley; or Sixty Years Since," the first of his series of twenty-nine novels, known as the Waverley novels. Scott continued to write anonymously for thirteen years. Twenty-five of the Waverley novels had been completed before he acknowledged his authorship of them. It is said that the snatches of verse which he used in his chapter headings finally betrayed him, for it was noted that he quoted from every known poet except the best-known, Sir Walter Scott.

Scott brought to perfection of form the historical novel, a genre of literature which Jane Porter claimed to have originated in her "Thaddeus of Warsaw," 1803, and her "Scottish Chiefs," 1809. Scott's novels are often spoken of as semi-historical, because it is in their backgrounds that they are historical rather than in their characters. Historical characters are never the main characters in Scott's novels. It is always fictitious character that holds the foreground. While the Waverley novels show trifling anachronisms, they are on the whole true to history. As pictures of certain times, they will stand severe historical tests, as pictures of certain historical people, they are poor likenesses.

"Tales of a Grandfather" was written by Scott for his grandchild, John Lockhart, who died. It is a juvenile that deserves to be rescued from neglect.)

(Jane Austen wrote but six novels, and while all are masterpieces, "Pride and Prejudice" ranks, perhaps, as her superstar. As the titles of the novels show, her themes are abstract. She deals not in adventures or incident but in the study of traits of character. There is nothing sensational in her plots; conversation holds a larger place than narration. Her books belong to the novel of manners. It was the manners of her age that Jane Austen painted.

"Northanger Abbey" was a burlesque of Mrs. Radcliffe's "Mysteries of Udolpho," a story of haunted abbeys, which gave rise to the Horror School in fiction, the school of Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein," and Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights."

"Persuasion," the only novel by Jane Austen that contains a note of pathos, was published posthumously, together with "Northanger Abbey."

The "Steventon" edition of Jane Austen's works takes its name from the town of Steventon in Hampshire, where the novelist was born.

"There is more caste snobbishness, I think, in Jane Austen's novels than in any other novels of equal genius. She, far more than Thackeray, is the novelist of snobs. . . . Her stories are of people who reveal themselves almost exclusively in talk. She wastes no time in telling us what people and places look like."—Robert Lynd in "Old and New Masters," Scribner.)

(Ainsworth was a writer of historical novels "by profession rather than by vocation." He "crammed for the historical details," and relied greatly on the illustrations to make his narrative a success. Cruikshank was the making of him as an author. Ainsworth's novels dwell especially on historical horrors. Crimes and cruelties fill their pages. Executions are plentiful, and are described in graphic detail.

Ainsworth's most popular work is "The Tower of London," which tells the story of Lady Jane Grey. "Windsor Castle" treats of Henry the Eighth, and the bloody tale of his wives. "Guy Fawkes" rehearses the gunpowder treason and plot of November fifth. "Jack Sheppard" is another rogue novel, like Fielding's "Jonathan Wild." "Old Saint Paul's" describes the Great Fire of 1666, which destroyed Saint Paul's Cathedral in London. 1666 was also the Plague Year which Defoe described in his Journal.)

(Bulwer-Lytton was a most versatile man of letters. He wrote poetry, drama, history, and fiction. The historical romance was the field in which he won the most enduring success. "The Last Days of Pompeii," describing the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius; "Rienzi," which Wagner made into an opera; "Harold," "The Last of the Barons," are Lord Lytton's best historical novels. Lytton put more fact and less fiction into his novels than did Scott. He copied long passages from historians and inserted these passages in the pages of his novels. Lytton's novels show a gain in accuracy but a loss in imagination over Scott's.

Lytton also turned his hand to the domestic novel. In "Pelham," "The Caxtons," "Ernest Maltravers," "Kenelm Chillingly," and "My Novel" he has left us excellent examples of the novel of contemporary manners.

In "The Coming Race" he gave us another Utopia, an advance upon Sir Thomas More's. And in "A Strange Story," a mystery tale, he experimented with the elements of the supernatural.

"Eugene Aram" is Lytton's representative novel of criminal life. The historical character of Aram was used again by Thomas Hood in "The Dream of Eugene Aram," a poem.

"Pilgrims of the Rhine" is a historic travel romance, which contains an interesting rendering of the adventures of Reynard the Fox.)

The Rose and the Ring. Putnam, $1.00.

(Thackeray won his first fame as a humorist. To the London Punch, which appeared first in 1841, he was a regular contributor for ten years, publishing there his forty-five "Snob" papers. His "Hitherto Unidentified Contributions to Punch" is an additional volume to the Harper edition of his works.

Thackeray has written five major and four minor novels.

"Vanity Fair," the title taken from "Pilgrim's Progress," came first in 1847. In this "novel without a hero" he aimed to show a set of people living without God in the world." It marked Thackeray as "England's gentlest satirist and one of her greatest novelists of manners. The dramatic version of "Vanity Fair" by Langdon Mitchell is not only a good dramatization but also good drama.

In "Pendennis" Thackeray proclaimed Fielding his master, and made a return to realism. Pendennis, the hero, was a new Tom Jones, and Thackeray strove to draw as natural a portrait of a young man as Fielding had drawn.

"Henry Esmond" is Thackeray's artistic masterpiece; "not the greatest but the most perfect" of his works. In artistic construction it is recognized as flawless. "It is as a novel what 'The Ode on a Grecian Urn' is as a poem." "The Virginians," a sequel to "Henry Esmond" is weak in construction. "Esmond" had the advantage of being published as a whole instead of serially. The story is told in the first person, which prevents the author's intrusions. Thackeray's personal interventions were his great failing as a novelist. "Esmond" is free from his customary "preachings," and is consequently more read than any of his other books.

"The Newcomes" is Thackeray's largest canvas. It consists of the biographical memoirs of a family, told, supposedly, by Arthur Pendennis, who was already known to Thackeray's readers.

Thackeray's novels are not distinctly historical, but they show the lingering influence of the historical novel. "Vanity Fair" is laid in the time of the battle of Waterloo, and while it gives no historical details as Hugo does in his famous Waterloo chapter in "Les Misérables," it gives a vivid picture of the period as a whole. "Esmond" is laid in the time of Queen Anne, and "copies the language of that time."

Thackeray's minor novels are: "Barry Lyndon," another of the crime novels similar to "Jonathan Wild"; "Lovel the Widower"; "Philip"; and "Denis Duval."

Thackeray's lectures in America and England are published in two volumes: "English Humorists of the Eighteenth Century," and "The Four Georges."

The classic Christmas story, "The Rose and the Ring," was written by Thackeray in Rome for the little daughter of the American sculptor, William Story.

As Thackeray requested that no authorized biography should ever be written of him, the biographical edition of his works (Harper), containing prefaces by his daughter, Mrs. Richmond Ritchie, is the nearest approach which we have to an authorized account of the novelist. Leslie Stephen, Thackeray's son-in-law, wrote a life in the Dictionary of National Biography, which gives another impersonal account of the novels.

(Altho Dickens was younger than Thackeray, he came into fame long before him. "The Pickwick Papers" in 1837 antedated "Vanity Fair" by ten years. Dickens first made fiction democratic. He discovered "the average person." As the champion of the humble and the downtrodden, he filled his books with the grievances of the poor.

Among his seventeen long novels, Dickens held "David Copperfield" to be his best work. It is generally rated as his masterpiece. "Great Expectations" is always regarded as the best constructed of his stories. Dickens' plots suffered from serial publication, he wrote without any settled scheme at the start. Sometimes he carried as many as three stories serially at one time. Cissing in his fine study of Dickens (Dodd) said that the novel with Dickens was an improvisation. "What he had written, he had written."

Dickens had a number of well-known illustrators whose names are enduringly associated with his works: George Cruikshank, Daniel Maclise, R. A., "Phiz" (Hablot K. Browne), John Leech, Marcus Stone and others. The Houghton and Scribner editions reproduce the original illustrations.

Dickens wrote as a humorist first of all and then as a humanitarian. Several of his "propagandist" novels were attacks upon evils of his time and led to public reforms. Prison horrors were exposed in "Barnaby Rudge"; Chancery Court abuses in "Bleak House"; and schoolroom cruelties in "Oliver Twist."

"Master Humphrey's Clock" was the original title given to an unfinished serial which contained "The Old Curiosity Shop" and Barnaby Rudge."

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" was left unfinished when Dickens died. Wilkie Collins attempted a solution of the "mystery" in "John Jasper's Secret.")

READE, CHARLES. 1814-1884.

Complete works. 17 v. Scribner, $42.50
Works, 9 v. Harper, $15.00; 7 v. Harper, $8.75
The Cloister and the Hearth,
Burt, $1.25
Crowell, $2.00
Dutton, Everyman, 90c. Temple, $2.00
Harper, 2 v. $5.00; 1 v. $2.50

(Reade wrote the didactic novel, the novel with a lesson to teach. His books were all reformatory in purpose and may be listed according to their themes, as follows:

"It Is Never Too Late To Mend," an account of tortures done to prisoners in English and Australian jails. A novel directly inspired by "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"Griffith Gaunt," a sentimental criminal novel of the "Eugene Aram" type, treating of the marriage problem.

"Christie Johnstone," dealing with Scotch fishing life and being an attack on hero worship in society.

"Hard Cash," the mismanagement of lunatic asylums.

"Put Yourself in His Place," the terrorism practiced in Trade Unions.

"A Woman Hater," advocating Woman's Rights.

Reade's one historical romance is his masterpiece, "The Cloister and the Hearth" is a picture of life in Germany and Italy at the close of the middle ages, the hero being the father of Erasmus.

Reade's novels were compiled rather than written. He went to endless historical research and investigation for the facts they contain. For his historical novel he is said to have read "not only volumes but book-shelves and libraries."

Reade was a very persistent and unsuccessful dramatist. His novels show the hand of the playwright in their abundant dramatic dialog. He had a trick of making a paragraph of a single sentence, giving his novels the sententious appearance of a play. Reade was the first writer to introduce the literary hybrid of the novelized drama and the dramatized novel.)

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. 1815-1882.

The Barsetshire Novels 13 v. Dodd, $17.55. 6 v.

The Parliamentary Novels. 17 v. Dodd, $22.95.
The Manor-House Novels. 11 v. Dodd, $14.85
Works—Miscellaneous 16 v. Lane, 50c. ea.

(Trollope was a very prolific writer whose works number a hundred or more volumes, including novels, tales, history, travel, and biography. His forty-odd novels are divided into three series: The Chronicles of Barsetshire, or The Cathedral Stories; The Parliamentary novels; and The Manor-House novels. Each series forms a chain of stories in which the same characters appear again and again. Altho the novels gain by being read sequentially, each volume is complete in itself.

The Barsetshire novels are the most popular series. The stories are all laid in the cathedral town of Barchester, and the characters consist mainly of the clergy, bishops, archdeacons, rectors, and curates. Altho Trollope's personal acquaintance with ecclesiastics was very slight, his portraits of clergymen are the best in English fiction.

Trollope's Autobiography (Dodd) lost him many readers for his novels. The mechanical methods of composition to which he confessed in its pages,—250 words every fifteen minutes for three hours a day,—seemed to prove to the public that there was no inspiration in his work, only "elbow grease" as Trollope called it. This prejudice that regards the novels as just so much "penmanship" is dying out.)

Selections from the poetry of Charlotte, Emily, Anne, and Bramwell Brontë, Putnam, $2.00.

(With the Brontë sisters we come for the first time to the novel of tragedy, and to the novel of few characters and narrow range.

Charlotte (Mrs. Arthur Bell Nicholls) outlived her sisters, and of all her family attained the greatest fame. Her books were written always with an aching heart, and were transcriptions of her sombre surroundings and the tragic events of her life.

"The Professor" was a short sketch which Charlotte afterwards enlarged in "Villette." In "Jane Eyre" she introduced a new style of heroine, the first ugly heroine in fiction. "Shirley" is a portrait of her sister Emily. The story is an historical allegory, based on the misery that followed the introduction of machinery into Yorkshire. "Villette" is Charlotte's masterpiece. The scene is laid in Brussels, where the author once taught school. The original ending of "Villette" was so painful to her readers that Charlotte changed it in later editions.

Emily Brontë wrote but one novel, "Wuthering Heights." It is a sinister, repulsive tale that in grim horror belongs with Bram Stoker's "Dracula," and Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein." Emily Brontë wrote the greatest poetry of all the Brontë sisters. Matthew Arnold said of her that "for passion, vehemence, and grief she had no equal since Byron." Her "Last Lines" and "The Old Stoic" are of wonderful inspiration.

Anne Brontë had talent but no genius. "Agnes Grey" is the story of a governess, and "The Tenant of Wildfeld Hall," a tale of the evils of drink and profligacy. Anne's acquaintance with sin and wickedness, as shown in her novels, was so astounding that Charlotte saw fit to explain in a preface that the source of her sister's intimate knowledge of evil was her brother Bramwell's dissolute ways.)

(George Eliot who was Marian Evans, and later Mrs. Cross, wrote eight novels, which fall into two equal groups. The first four are in her early more inspired manner, and the last four in her later ponderous and laborious vein. W. C. Brownell in "Victorian Prose Masters" sees "in the former a native and in the latter an acquired point of view."

"Scenes from Clerical Life," "Adam Bede," "The

"Mill on the Floss," and "Silas Marner," written between 1858 and 1861, are novels of English rural life, drawn largely from George Eliot's own experience. The first, published anonymously, contained many portraits that were recognized in her native village of Nuneaton. A dissenting minister there long passed as the author. "Adam Bede" was a portrait of George Eliot's father. "The Mill on the Floss" a story of a brother and sister, was modelled on the author's own brother and herself. "Silas Marner," in the opinion of Henry James, "holds a higher place than any of the author's works. It is more nearly a masterpiece; it has more of that simple, rounded, consummate aspect, that absence of loose ends and gaping issues, which marks a classical work."

The second group written between 1863 and 1876 consists of "Felix Holt, the Radical," a political novel; "Daniel Deronda," a story of the Jewish people; "Romola," a historical novel of Florence in the time of Savonarola; and "Middlemarch," a tedious, disconnected novel, "a half-dozen novels in one," in which the author returns to English provincial life.

George Eliot introduced the psychological novel. She was a serious thinker, and brought moral philosophy into fiction. W. C. Brownell points out that she gave fiction a turn "for analyzing rather than depicting character and emotion." Her novels are pre-eminently of intellectual interest. The plot turns on what the characters think, not what they feel. She has been labelled as "exclusively an observer," a writer lacking in creative imagination. Her second group of books was the result of intellectual toil rather than of genius.

With Jane Austen and Charlotte Brontë, George Eliot takes rank as one of the world's three greatest women novelists. According to Augustine Birrell her place is third: "the alphabetical order of their names is also their order of merit."

(Charles Kingsley was a clergyman of the Church of England, and late in life held the chair of History at Cambridge. His novels are mostly historical romances. Kingsley put the historical novel to new uses; not to teach history but to illustrate some religious truth.

"Westward Ho!" is a tale of the Spanish Main in the days of Queen Elizabeth. "Hypatia; or, New Foes with Old Faces" is a story of the pagan girl-philosopher who was torn to pieces by a Christian mob. The story is strongly anti-Roman Catholic, reflecting Kingsley's controversy with Cardinal Newman at the time of the Oxford Movement. "Hereward the Wake," or "the Watchful," is a tale of a Saxon outlaw, "the last of the English." Bulwer-Lytton pictured the same period in "Harold." "Two Years Ago" is a story of the Crimean war.

Kingsley's social novels are "Alton Locke," a Cathedral story that antedated Trollope's, and "Yeast"; both sermon-novels advancing Christian Socialism.

"Water Babies," Andrew Lang said, "would be a tale for children were it not for the satire directed at the parents of the period."

"The Tutor's Story" was completed by Kingsley's daughter, Mary St. Leger Kingsley Harrison, the author of many novels under the name of "Lucas Malet."

(Henry Kingsley, altho not so well known as his brother, wrote with far greater art than Charles. The Rev. Hugh Benson has said, "I have never known a critic of recognized authority who did not rate the art of Henry higher than that of his brother."

Henry's two earliest romances are his best. "Geoffrey Hamlyn" is one of the best stories ever written of Australia. It was based on the author's own adventures in search of his fortune in the gold fields of Australia. "Ravenshoe" is a topsy-turvy romance that ranks as Henry's masterpiece.)

(Wilkie Collins evolved a new type of fiction, the crime novel of intricate plot and baffling mystery. "The Woman in White" was his first sensational success, and was followed later by his masterpiece, "The Moonstone," which is frequently spoken of as "the best plot ever written." Collins' novels were forerunners of the modern detective story.)

(Meredith's career as a novelist may be divided into three periods: the earliest includes "The Shaving of Shagpat," a fantastic Arabian story, whose meaning was explained by McKechnie in "Meredith's Allegory," Doran; "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel," his most epigrammatic work, containing the famous "Pilgrim's Scrip"; "Sandra Belloni," and its sequel, "Vittoria"; and "Rhoda Fleming," his only novel about the peasant class.

The second period includes "Harry Richmond," the most romantic of his novels; "Beauchamp's Career," a political novel founded on the actual career of his friend, Admiral Maxse; "The Egoist," a comedy in narrative, by most critics regarded as his masterpiece; and "The Tragic Comedians," a thrilling love story that followed and interpreted the historic love story of Lassalle and Helene von Donniges. Meredith owed much to the autobiography of Helene translated and published by Macmillan.

The third period includes "Diana of the Crossways," Meredith's most nearly "popular" book, a portrait of Sheridan's grand-daughter, the poetess Caroline Norton; "Lord Ormont and His Aminta"; and "The Amazing Marriage." These last three novels all deal with the problem of unhappy marriage.

Meredith is the most intellectual of our novelists. His narratives are always "the vehicle of some philosophy." The "Essay on Comedy" is the key to Meredith's novels, for he regarded his work as "a department of comedy," comedy being the seed of thoughtful laughter. Meredith gave to fiction a new heroine, the woman of fine brain and strong body. He boasted he never wrote a word to please the public. He became great without ever becoming popular.

lar. He counted as the greatest compliment ever paid him the statement that he had brought about a change in public taste.)

A Correction

In Lesson 25 of the "Home School for Booksellers," featured in our issue of January 10th, the authorship of "Philip Dru Administrator" was assigned to Colonel E. M. House. As the book was published anonymously several years ago by B. W. Huebsch and no authorized statement as to the identity of its author has yet been given, the assumption on our own part was rather premature, despite the fact that similar statements have appeared more or less frequently in the press during the past year.

Removal of Canadian Prohibition Against Enemy Publications of United States Origin

The postal administration of Canada has advised this department that, effective January 1, 1920, the censorship orders in council under which authority was granted to prohibit newspapers, periodicals, etc., which contravene the war regulations, were canceled; and that, in consequence, the various publications printed and published in the United States, which were prohibited from circulation in Canada, may now be delivered to addresses in that country.

Authors Gossip

WORD comes from London that Miss Daisy Ashford of "The Young Visiter" fame was recently married to James Devlin with whom she had been associated in war work.

ANOTHER honor has come to Frank H. Simonds in the bestowal by the King of Greece of the Cross of Officer of the Royal Order of the Redeemer as a recognition of the value of his history of the world war.

JOHN GALSWORTHY is now enjoying a vacation in France and Spain but will return to London shortly to witness the production of a new play which he recently completed.

As the author of the most widely read book of the last 200 years, Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, editor-in-chief of the Christian Herald has won peculiar distinction. "In His Steps" has outsold every other book ever published with the exception of the Bible and "Pilgrim's Progress." Its sales now total more than twenty million copies.

ROYALTIES due to Vicente Blasco Ibáñez from E. P. Dutton & Co. and Alfred A. Knopf, as well as all sums due him for his lecture tour under the J. B. Pond Lyceum Bureau, were recently attached by a Buenos Aires export firm to recover on judgments obtained against the novelist some years ago. The plaintiff claims $6982; sufficient property was attached to pay the amount, it was said.

As a slight token of appreciation Oliver Herford dedicated his most recent work "This Giddy Globe" to President Wilson with these words: "With all his faults he quotes me still." President Wilson has the distinction of being the only President of the United States to whom Mr. Herford has dedicated a book.

REPORTS from across the water indicate that W. L. George is to visit these shores next September, and rumor, ever busy, has circulated a statement that he is coming to America to find out for himself whether American girls are as sexless and American men as cold as American fiction would make them out to be. Emphatically denying this statement, Mr. George recently wrote to the New York Times Book Review saying that he never made such an idiotic suggestion and that since his visit will be limited to only a few months it is obvious that he cannot be setting out on a "ridiculous quest."

LAWRENCE HOUSMAN, English writer, and author of "The Heart of Peace," a widely quoted book of poems of 1919, and "An English Woman's Love Letters," is planning to spend the spring in America.

IN THE FIELD OF THE RETAILER

Government Interested in Training Retailers

As a further indication that the country at large has awakened to the need for special training in the field of retail salesmanship we find that the Federal Board for Vocational Education is now trying to help the states formulate an adequate plan for the training of store workers. The idea of help from the government is splendid, but the project will fail in its infancy, if a stereotyped plan for courses is drawn up. No one plan, however good it may be, will serve equally well for all sections of the country and the courses, therefore, must be individualized to meet the requirements of different parts of the country. What serves Chicago admirably would not serve Galesburg, Ill., as well. Neither could New York's plan be used effectively in Iowa.

In drawing up any plan, however, there are several phases of the work which should receive special thought. Bulletin 22 on Retail Selling, issued by the Federal Board, contains suggestive material for the conduct of training courses in retail selling—and it is also well to bear in mind the following points outlined in a recent number of The Vocational Summary:

I. The types of training courses which should be offered in order to include training for all groups of store workers. Those who are expecting to enter the field of retail business must be cared for also, and may be reached thru the high school courses given in the third and fourth years on a co-operative basis.

II. There must be an adequate division of time between store and school.

III. The course should be a training course with vocational aim and not a subject given in the high school program according to methods used in academic subjects.

IV. A state plan for retail selling must set up and maintain high standards for the qualifications of teachers.

V. One of the best ways of strengthening the retail-selling training is thru co-operative organization between the merchants and the schools. The training cannot be given by the public schools alone. It must be given thru the joint efforts of the merchants and the educational authorities.

VI. The schools must be so organized as to enable the retail-selling course to operate on a co-operative part-time basis. And the merchants must assume their share of the responsibility. For the co-operative part-time workers there must be a wage understanding, a definite routing thru a variety of store positions and a recognition of the value of the training course by employing an individual who has been trained, in preference to one who has not taken the course.

Books as Valentines

St. Valentine's Day is likely to be more widely observed this year than for some time past. There will be a demand for gifts that adequately express the appropriate sentiment and in this connection nothing can be found more suited to the purpose than a good book. Love stories, of course, have the greatest appeal, but there are many others which will prove attractive. Take, for example, the numerous little volumes of verse, many of them printed in colors, bound in art boards and boxed. Then, too, there are many books of essays now on the market which should exactly meet the needs of a friendly gift of remembrance. Practically all these various lines offer the dealer a satisfactory margin of profit and it is possible to secure them in small lots from the book jobbers.

Politeness—A Salesman's Asset

Politeness has been singled out in times past as one of the fundamentals of success in business, and books on salesmanship are wont to cite it as the most necessary thing in a salesman's equipment. Walt Mason now interposes with a complaint that those who laud the admirable Chestertonian quality most highly, fail to enlarge upon its advantages, while books make a point of omitting all explanations and descriptions which might help a disengaged man to acquire that elusive asset. Elaborating on this grievance, the humorist states that politeness is the most difficult of all arts to acquire. It is such a subtle thing that men of coarse fiber can never grasp it. It is not a thing of bows and becks and wreathed smiles. It is an atmosphere. It is not a formula, and you might commit to memory all the polite phrases in the books of etiquette, and all the gestures of the dramatic schools, and fail of being polite.

Merchants often queer themselves by being too attentive, too solicitous. "There are times," he says, "when I like to go into a trade palace and just rubber around, seeing what there is to see, hoping to find something worth buying. But this glorious privilege is seldom permitted. The minute I blow into the store the proprietor or one of his henchmen is at my elbow, notebook in hand, asking what he can do for me. If I say I don't know, he proceeds to show me. He may have been in the business fifty years, and has never learned the fundamental truth that there are moments when it's good to be alone."

There is such a thing then, as striking a happy medium, for politeness in its real sense is something more and something less than constant, solicitous attention. Try to find it! In a bookstore, of all places, customers should be allowed the pursuit of happiness without interference. One of the great joys of life, to one who is properly constituted, is to rummage around in a bookstore, unmolested by an overzealous salesman seeking to define politeness.

AMONG THE PUBLISHERS

"AMERICANISM VS. BOLSHEVISM" by Ole Hanson is scheduled for publication this week by Doubleday, Page & Co.

ONE of the Bobbs-Merrill leaders for January is "Taxi," a new novel by George Agnew Chamberlain which is scheduled for publication on the 28th of the month.

A NEW collection of short stories and sketches by John Galsworthy, to be called "Tatterdemalion" is announced for February publication by Chas. Scribner's Sons.

RONALD PRESS is putting forward a big campaign of advertising on Montgomery's "Income Tax Procedure" 1920 edition, including the mailing of over 350,000 announcements and circulars together with large display space in four prominent magazines.

IN the sugarless times of the present, the title "Raspberry Jam" chosen by Carolyn Wells for her new novel which the Lippincotts will bring out soon sounds particularly tempting and attractive.

"THE ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES OF THE PEACE" by John Maynard Keynes, representative of the British Treasury at the Peace Conference will be issued in this country sometime this month by Harcourt, Brace & Howe.

"A GERMAN DESERTER'S WAR EXPERIENCES" (Huebsch), which Mr. Burleson declared non-mailable and therefore non-salable during the war, has just been released by the Post Office Department. It is of interest in this connection to note that simultaneously with the suppression of this remarkable book in this country it was brought out in England and enjoyed a steady, unmolested sale thruout the war.

WITH snow flurries an everyday occurrence and the thermometer hovering perilously near the zero mark, it is something of a relief to pick up one of Dutton's new books, "A Little Garden the Year Round," and know that in some spots flowers are made to bloom in all seasons. The book contains much useful information for the garden-lover.

A recent contribution to books on the drama is Oliver M. Sayler's work on "The Russian Theater under the Revolution," published by Little, Brown & Co. The book, written after visiting Moscow and Petrograd during the Bolshevik revolution, brings forward interesting evidence as to the conditions of the theater in that country and will prove an eye-opener to the many who believed all things were either in a state of decay or else in riotous confusion.

LOVERS of Robert Louis Stevenson will welcome Scribner's unique little volume "A Book of R. L. S." by George E. Brown, which tells the story of his books, his friends and his travels.

PRESIDENT HADLEY of Yale University has a new book "The Moral Basis of Democracy" dealing with the problems of political science. The volume takes its place along with the other thoughtful and significantly worthwhile books from the Yale University Press.

"KING JOHN," a new volume in the Furness Variorum edition of Shakespeare, has just been published by the Lippincott Co., making the nineteenth volume in this set. It has been three and a half years in the preparation.

BEFORE returning to England Viscount Grey left a small manuscript with his publishers, Houghton Mifflin Co. The title of this new book is "Recreation," and in it the statesman describes the charms of his favorite pastimes—fly-fishing, birding, and the reading of books.

"IRISH IMPRESSIONS," Gilbert K. Chesterton's latest book of essays, comes as the result of a visit to Ireland on a lecture tour under the auspices of the war aims committee. Giving as it does a new and intimate glimpse of the Irish people, it will no doubt be eagerly sought by all who are interested in the Ireland of to-day. The book is published by John Lane Co.

SOMETHING very like a record, as current publishing practices go, was established by Doubleday, Page & Co. in getting Ray Stannard Baker's inside story of the Peace Conference before the public. The writing of the book Mr. Baker accomplished in about two weeks, sending the completed manuscript to the Doubleday, Page offices November 4th. Plates embodying all the author's corrections were ready for the press November 18th and on November 24th—less than six weeks from the day the opening sentence was written—the finished book, bound, stamped and jacketed was on its way to booksellers.

TWO very different views of Germany are presented to the reading public this week in two books which come from the Harper press. One is found in "A Year as a Government Agent," Mrs. Norman Whitehouse's account of her work for the Committee on Public Information, when it was her duty to get the truth about America into Germany. The other picture lies in William Dean Howells' reminiscences of the Germany of by-gone days. This latter book entitled "Hither and Thither in Germany" is a new volume in the Travel Companions series.

A New Selling Method

David Karsner's authorized "Life and Letters of Eugene V. Debs" has been taken over from the Irving Kaye Davis Co. and is to bear the imprint of Boni & Liveright. In attempting to reach out to a public who would be especially interested at this time the publishers have devised a new appeal to the sympathy of the reader.

If copies are ordered direct at $1.50 or six copies for $8.00 plus postage, a contribution of five cents per copy will be made to a Fund in Behalf of Political Prisoners. The appeal as given in their full-page advertisement in the New Republic is as follows:

"You will urge your friends to read it. Not only because it will interest them as deeply as it will you—but because you will thus give material assistance to our plan for raising A Fund in Behalf of Political and Industrial Prisoners.

"We have arranged to contribute five cents for every volume sold after the first 10,000 copies, towards the funds to secure the defence and release of all men and women now in jail in this country for their political or economic opinions. With your help and the help of your friends and of the innumerable other believers in liberty of thought in this country, we believe we can sell 3,000,000 copies. If we do, it will mean a direct contribution of $149,500 to the cause of political freedom.

"This fund will be administered by the treasurers of the following organizations: Workers' Defense Union, National Civil Liberties Bureau, National Socialist Defense Committee. No such sale can be achieved thru regular channels—bookstores, etc. But if you buy your own copy at once, and extra copies to distribute among your friends, your employees, your associates, the teachers and ministers in your town, etc.,—and urge others whom you meet, on trains, at your club, in your office, in your home, to be sure and buy a copy,—and thus start an endless chain of urging to buy—the deed can easily be done! Do Your Part in the Cause of Freedom of Opinion! Start Right Now—with this Coupon!"

A Complete Translation

There has been so much discussion as to the public's attitude on all things emanating from the Central Empires that it will be of interest to note what attitude the book-buying public take in this matter.

One publisher, Scott & Seltzer, believing that the public would be prejudiced against a book with a German author's name has adopted the new expedient of translating the author's name as well as his book. "The Burning Secret" by Stefan Zweig, has been published as by "Stephen Branch" (branch being the English of Zweig). The publishers say that they have the famous Austrian author's permission to use this method. It will be interesting to see how the public accept it.

How to Organize a Publishing Business

An appeal for new subscribers to the stock in a publishing business has been going out to authors and one of the form letters has been printed in the Authors' League Bulletin as a warning to its members.

The Neale Publishing Co.
August 7th, 1919.

Miss _____
Dear Madam:

It is the purpose of the founders of the corporation about which I write to conduct a publishing house of the highest class, principally to comprise experienced publishers, men of letters, and authors of marked ability. We shall be glad to number you among the stockholders. As a stockholder you would incur no liability whatsoever, nor as a founder, and as founder you would receive one share of common stock without charge to every share of preferred bought.

Thus the authors among the stockholders will not only obtain an outlet for their publications on terms highly favorable to them, by which they will receive not less than half the profits derived from the sale of their books, but in addition they will receive their share of the profits made by the company.

The first $10,000 offer exceptional opportunities to investors, because, as said above, the purchasers will be counted as founders and will receive without charge one share of common stock for each share of preferred bought. As we expect the rest of the first $10,000 preferred to be taken at an early date, we have not had the enclosed announcement printed, and for the same reason you should act at once if you wish to get two shares for the price of one.

Already subscriptions are coming in, a bank account has been opened, the articles of incorporation have been written, and the new house is about to begin business.

WALTER NEALE.

Think of This!

The truth is that the publishing trade is the very worst organized in the world, says The Bookshelf (the literary organ of Chapman and Hall). It has no sort of cohesion, no flickering light of esprit de corps. So far from desiring to help one another, the rival publishers put every possible obstacle in one another's way. Their official association is an academic body, which spends its time in discussing infringements of copyright in the Balearic Islands, but absolutely declines to legislate upon vital matters such as trade terms and the autocracy of wholesalers. The individual publisher, when he is not busy in endeavoring to filch his neighbor's best author, wastes his peace of mind in constructing a scheme for underselling his wares to the bookseller. Meanwhile, the cause of literature is betrayed for the pettiest commercial considerations, and the young writer flees in despair to the richer pastures of America.

English Book-Trade News

From Our London Correspondent

Charles J. Sawyer, publisher for the Haworthen Press announces a reprint of "A Cypress Grove" by William Drummond of Haworthen. The text of the reprint is that of the edition of 1630. It will be limited to an issue of 6000 copies, printed on fine hand-made paper; paper copies to sell at 6/6; vellum, £4, 4s.

George H. Grubb has been elected chairman of the Publications Committee of the American Chamber of Commerce in London.

In a statement intimating that it will be necessary to add 10 per cent to present printing charges, the London Master Printers' Association asserts that investigations carried on by the London Costing Committee show that average manufacturing costs alone have gone up about 150 per cent since 1914. In the same time the cost of materials has increased by percentage varying from 100 to 600 per cent, and there has been a serious advance in the price of paper in the last few weeks. The London Costing Committee is now engaged in an investigation of the cost of printing in a number of printing establishments.

Addressing London Mail Matter

For the purpose of facilitating prompt delivery of mail, London has been divided into certain geographical postal divisions, and these divisions should be indicated on covers of communications, parcels, etc. The city proper is known as the "E.C." (East Central) district; west of that is the "W.C." (West Central) district; still further west, the "W" (West) district; east of the "E.C." is designated by "E." On the North, there are two districts indicated geographically by the letters "N.W." and "N." and similarly on the south, the "S.E." and "S.W." districts. There is no "S" division.

In addition to the foregoing local divisions, there has been instituted a further "key" plan under which each of the above districts has been divided into numbered areas, such as W.1, W.3, or E.C.2, etc. The splitting up of the geographically lettered districts into these small numbered areas has led to considerable improvement in quick sorting and delivery, and the postal authorities have issued warnings that the omission of such numbers may lead to otherwise avoidable delay.

American business houses should instruct their mailing departments not to omit, after the word London, the geographical letters and number on the cover of communications in all cases where such particulars are known or can be ascertained. As a general rule London business houses indicate these details on their letterheads, but frequently in small type which is liable to be overlooked. Where the information does not appear, and is not otherwise known, and where the circumstances render it important that even a few hours delay should be avoided, such particulars might be ascertained at public libraries possessing copies of Kelly's London Postal Directory, or of the Official British Postal Guide.

As an example of what is desired by the British postal authorities: The Publishers' Circular, 19 Adam St., Strand, London, W.C.2.

An Information Bureau Started

Publication Committee of American Chamber of Commerce in London Opens One for All Interested Businesses

Many in the book-trade are no doubt unaware that a live Publications Committee, a branch of the American Chamber of Commerce in London, is ready and eager to act as a bureau of information for all businesses which are directly interested in problems of the literary and publishing world. To further its aim of becoming a center of information, a card list is being built up, giving particulars of the business carried on by all English branches of American publishing concerns or the English representatives of the same.

The Committee is made up of alert representatives of American publishers—all of them experienced men whose advice is at the disposal of those who want it. At a meeting held the latter part of November it was decided to send a letter to all American publishers of books and magazines in the United States inviting them to consult the Committee on any matter whatsoever concerning which they desired information. The Committee is anxious that its wide knowledge of the British market should be drawn upon as frequently as need arises, and it announces that cabled inquiries will receive instant attention.

Among the matters which it now has down for consideration and action are:

1. The establishment of a Bureau of Inquiry for American publishers in America, and their representatives in Great Britain.
2. To encourage the opening of new London branches of American publishing concerns.
3. To investigate freight charges on, and possible preference for the delivery of American literature coming into Great Britain.
4. The plan for members to exchange information concerning new American and British business propositions.
5. To watch any proposed modification and alteration of the copyright laws, and make effort to secure the amendment of any clause which may be an obstacle to the development of American publishing interests in Great Britain.
6. To seek to have American Consuls in Europe provide the fullest information as to how the distribution of American literature may be developed in foreign countries.

The Book-Trade at the Front

That American troops are still on European soil and still being cheered by the self-sacrificing service that American girls have been able to offer thru the channel of Y. M. C. A. huts is evidenced by a letter of recent date received at the Stokes office from Miss Quinn who was for fourteen years connected with that firm.

November 30, 1919
Ochtendung, Germany

Dear E. P. S. care F. A. Stokes Co.

For the past month and more I have been out in this little German town with the troops supposedly destined for Silesia. One other Y girl and myself came out here about a week before the troops arrived and opened up a hut for them so that it was all ready by the time they came. Opening it up meant many things, as we had to put in running water, build and fireproof a cinema booth, build a stage and dressing rooms for our shows besides such minor things as painting all the tables and chairs. We have a Machine Gun Battalion of 500 men and about twenty officers, and they are all splendid fellows.

Ochtendung is just a dead little German village and the soldiers have no place to go except to the Y, so we are always kept busy. We serve twice a day—chocolate, coffee, pies, doughnuts, layer cake, and a great variety of pastry—at cost on week days and free on Sundays and special occasions. On Sundays we serve breakfast also, for those who want to sleep late. We have movies (with piano and violin) every night; a dance orchestra from Coblenz three times a week; boxing once a week; a professional (imported) show once a week, and our own home talent shows in between. You'd never suspect me of being a dramatic composer, coach, and actress, but in the Army one has to be many things that one never dreamed of being.

For to-morrow night we have staged a big dance, with American girls (Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., etc.) from all over the area, and we are holding our breath to see whether the troops get paid to-morrow, for the night of pay day always means a night of torture, with even our most reliable roaringly drunk. It takes only a very little of this German wine. We have one full-blooded Indian in the outfit and he always has a pocketful of knives and I have rarely seen him sober. I am the only one who can touch him when he is intoxicated and is drawing a knife on the crowd; but as fast as I take one knife away from him he is ready with another. It's a great life! I am enjoying it hugely. Everyone seems to think we will all be back in America very soon. I don't see how any of us can ever settle down again to routine after having almost one continuous round of excitement.

We are billeted in the priest's house and are pretty comfortable—or would be if it were not for the coal and wood shortage. We expect to freeze this winter, but are determined to freeze cheerfully. We have already had snow knee deep and every day it snows or rains, so it is always damp and cold. Fortunately in German beds, like the French, you sleep under a mattress, so we are always comfortable at night, but, oh, how we hate to get up in the morning!

Cordially,
ELIZABETH VERNON QUINN.

Is There a Profit in the Book Business?

Delaware, Ohio, January 9th, 1920.
Editor, PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

Could you, by any strain upon the imagination, discover the reason for the lack of bookstores in the 34 cities mentioned on page 1609 of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for December 20, 1919?

Now you wouldn't suppose, would you, that there could be any possible connection between this lack of bookstores, and the lack of profit in running a bookstore?

And you wouldn't expect to see new stores start up in these cities, almost overnight, would you, if the publishers waked up to the need of revision upward of their book discounts, and so revised them?

Well, my supposition is, that if a reasonable living profit could be made on books, every one of these towns would have all the bookstores it could handle.

Again Book Thieves!

New York, January 19, 1920.
Editor, PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

For the benefit of your readers and incidentally that it may be the means of our recovering our books, we beg to report the theft of a set of Sloan's "Life of Napoleon," original edition, with many colored plates, four volumes, imperial quarto, finely bound in full Levant morocco.

These books were boldly taken from our store a few days ago in spite of the vigilance of several clerks; this is the culmination of a series of similar thefts stretching over a period of six months and evidently the work of a discriminating and highly experienced expert in the "taking" profession. Among our other losses are included several rare first editions of Herman Melville, autograph letters of Robert Louis Stevenson, and other rarities.

THE BOOK CORNER.

As a simple solution of the H. C. of L. problem, without resorting to price fixing, Irving Fisher, professor of Political Economy at Yale, suggests a plan for adjusting the monetary unit. His new book "Stabilizing the Dollar," brought out by Macmillan, is given over to his theories on the subject and it is said that his plan has already won the endorsement of prominent economists.

The committee in charge of the celebration in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Booksellers' League, New York, has arranged for the banquet to be given on Monday evening at 6:30, February 9th, at the Park Avenue Hotel. The price per cover has been placed at $3.50, an attractive figure in these times of top prices for everything. The members of the League will attend without special charge on account of the regular dining privilege of membership. The only extra cost will be for their wives and lady friends—and carfare. Reservations should be secured at once by writing to Mr. Theodore E. Schulte, treasurer, 80 Fourth Avenue. Further announcements in connection with the event will be given in the next issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

RARE BOOKS, AUTOGRAPHS AND PRINTS

A collection of illuminated manuscripts, early editions of classical authors, etc., formed by Henry Ellis Allen, augmented by his son, Samuel Allen, will be sold at Sotheby's, in London, January 30.

There is every indication that excessively rare Americana, like the rarities of early English literature, will show sensational advances as opportunities occur. The next part of the DePuy sale will furnish some prices that will attract wide attention.

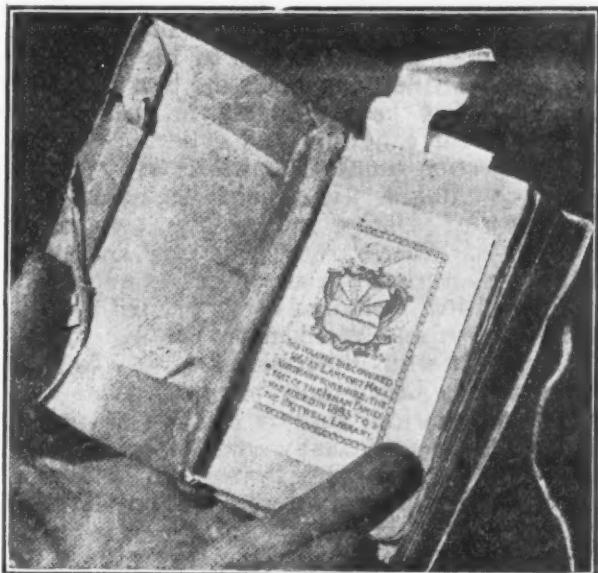

The Shakespearian-Bacon library of Dr. Isaac Hull Pratt was sold by Stan V. Henkels in Philadelphia, on January 22. Dr. Pratt was widely known as a Shakespearian scholar and his library was frequently consulted by students of the great dramatist.

Alfred W. Pollard of the British Museum, writing in the London Observer about the exodus of rare books to the United States, says that exodus has been going on ever since he knew anything about old books. Until recently his chief regrets were for the loss to England of the Gwynn Shakespeare, of 1619, the "Morte d'Arthur" and the "Titus Adronicus," but now there are a dozen or more important first editions the loss of which to England is to be forever regretted.

Library sets, angling literature and illustrated books of John F. Thompson, of Wood Haven, Long Island, were sold at the American Art Galleries on January 19. Private collections of library sets and art publications, including the libraries of Thatcher M. Adams, of this city, and Cyrus Osborn Baker, of East Orange, N. J. were sold on January 20 and 21. Both sales contained many choice library books.

George D. Smith's current catalog No. 102, containing 203 items of rare Americana quite justifies the claim, we believe, that no catalog of similar size has contained as many items of excessive rarity. The most valuable item of all is Hariot's "Brief and True Report of the new found land of Virginia," printed in 1590, valued at $10,000. This is the superlatively rare De Bry edition printed in English in the same year as it appeared in Latin, French and German and is the rarest of all the parts and has been for two centuries the most sought for of all English works on America. The E. D. Church catalog records in all eight perfect copies including the present one.

The library of Walter T. Wallace, of South Orange, N. J., will be sold at the American Art Galleries during the week of March 22-27. This will doubtless prove the most important sale of the season in this country and perhaps rank about the same in value as the Herschel V. Jones sale of last year. Mr. Wallace has been one of the most constant, painstaking and intelligent collectors of his time. He has been satisfied only with the best in literature and has been exacting in the highest degree about condition and collector's points. The collection numbers upwards of 3000 volumes covering a wide range beginning with the dawn of printing and coming down to our own time. There are several rare and beautiful manuscripts; many fine examples of early printing, including books printed by William Caxton and Wynken de Worde; colored plate books with illustrations by Rowlandson, Cruikshank, Leech and others; many English and American authors of the last century represented by unusually complete collections; and some fine bindings by modern binders as well as such older masters as Clovis Eve and Roger Payne. Mr. Wallace had a passion for the collector's favorite authors such as Goldsmith, Shelley, Dickens, Keats, Lamb, Leigh Hunt, Tennyson, Thackeray, Hawthorne and Poe and his collection of these authors is one of the remarkable features of his library. The eighteenth and nineteenth century authors are particularly rich in unique and presentation copies and association books.

The Cincinnati Post gave a three column write-up to an exhibit of manuscripts that the Stewart and Kidd Co. had for sale. A Poe manuscript at $500, a poem of Swinburne's $235, a Eugene Field poem at $350, etc. The exhibit included many specimens of fine binding and attracted much attention.

SIR MONTAGU BARLOW, M.P., AUCTIONEER AT SOTHEBY'S, STANDING BESIDE THE BRITWELL COURT COLLECTION OF BOOKS WHICH FETCHED £110,356

The library of Theodore L. De Vinne, founder of the De Vinne Press, was sold at the Anderson Galleries on January 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16. The catalog numbered 1941 items and was the most important collection of books pertaining to the history and art of printing ever sold in this country. It was primarily the working library of a student altho it contained many books that collectors may well take a pride in owning. The sale was well attended thruout and bidding was active and prices averaged high. The buyers represented all parts of the country. The general interest was doubtless due to the wide spread fame of De Vinne as the master printer of his time. A few of the items and the prices which they brought were as follows: More's "Utopia," quarto, Chelsea, 1906, $67.50, Ashendene Press edition; Bruner's "Manual," 10 vols., Paris, 1860-80, $115; Cole's "Old Dutch and Flemish Masters," folio, New York, 1895, $53; Didbin's "Bibliographical Decameron," 3 vols., quarto, London, 1817, $106; Livy's "Historiae Romanae Decades," 3 parts in 2, folio, Venice, 1470, $150, first edition of this translation from the Greek; Geoffrey Tory's "Champ Fleury," small folio, $195, first edition; Irving's "History of New York," 2 vols., 8vo. New York, $107.50; Grolier Club edition; "Fac-simile of the Laws and acts of the General Assembly of New York," printed by Bradford in 1694, New York, 1894, $270, one of three copies printed on vellum by the Grolier Club; "The Etched Work of Whistler," 1 vol., of text with three portfolios of plates, New York, 1910, $655, printed by the Grolier Club. There were many choice items printed by private presses and book clubs and all brought specially good prices.

The Book, Well Defined

A good book is:

1. An intellectual dynamo. The engine that furnishes the current that runs the factory that turns out ideas.
2. An intellectual shower bath of icy water early in the morning—makes you gasp, but is good for the mental nerves and muscles.
3. An open window somewhere, letting in gusts of fresh air. No matter where, just so some new stars and suns shine in, and some new breezes blow.
4. An uphill road into the mountains and the solitudes, where it is good for every one to go at times, and where all the great prophets of music, hope and ideals have often gone.
5. A tonic for the soul. So far I have refrained from suggesting any book. It is my business to write books not to suggest them. But in this last I would suggest—the Bible.

The New English Reference Catalogue Coming

It is good news for the American book-trade that a new edition of Whitaker's English Reference Catalogue is in preparation and is promised for the spring. Those who use this regularly will know that there has been no new edition since 1913, a seven year interval, during which time it has been practically impossible to quote quickly publisher's prices of English books, especially during the last three or four years when English prices have advanced so rapidly.

The new edition will have the usual full index in a separate volume making it a key to all books in print. Orders are now being booked at this office at the pre-publication price of $10.

Booksellers and libraries who have never had the English Reference Catalogue on their reference shelves should add it this year. It is the "Trade List Annual" of English publications published usually every three years and having a full author, title and subject index that is extremely valuable. It will pay for itself in orders taken in a very short time.

Advance orders for Whitaker's Reference Catalogue should be addressed to the American agents, R. R. BOWKER CO., 62 West 45th Street, New York.

Golden Poppy

a tale of the Habitant Country, by Jeffrey Deprend, author of "Embers."

"The Golden Poppy" is a powerful, gripping story, told in a simple, rugged style admirably adapted to depiction of the elemental scenes and personages found in the French-Canadian land, of which Mr. Deprend writes so well.

How the mirage of ambition blinds a man to the glory of a woman's love and how she rises from the ashes of her shrine to greet life's greatest gift, is told with masterly skill in this delightful story of a quaint and curious people.

"THE GOLDEN POPPY" has all the elements of a BEST seller.

Boccaccio's Decameron*The first complete American Edition, with a New Introduction*

The author is probably the best story-teller between Homer and De Foe. The wealth of the greatest English literature has largely been plundered from him. Chaucer, Shakespeare, Dryden, Keats, Tennyson, Longfellow, Swinburne and George Eliot helped themselves out of his work. Boccaccio's tales are classical, if not quite Virgilibus puerisque. They are Life with the true savor of his and of all time.

TWICE-A-MONTH

Beginning January First 1920

The LIBRARY JOURNAL—for forty-four years the leading monthly publication in the Library field—will be issued semi-monthly, appearing on the first and the fifteenth of each month.

This step to more frequent publication is in response to the need of librarians for a journal which can bring them timely information of developments in library work.

PUBLISHERS' ADVERTISING PLANS

The 5000 men and women who are actively engaged in the development of the "wider and wiser use of books" constitute a field which commands the attention of publishers.

The LIBRARY JOURNAL—twice-a-month—offers an opportunity for frequent and timely talks concerning the imprint and products of publishers. It offers an alert, aggressive medium which can carry book advertising to buyers not only of new titles but of standard works on topics of current interest.
